Time : 9am-11 :30am

Place : Radisson Blu Hôtel

The Malian Action-Research Institute for Peace (IMRAP for its acronym in French) in partnership with Interpeace, the Institute for Development Studies and Humanity United officially launch their project "Vestibule de la Paix" – A multi-stakeholder initiative for peacebuilding in Mali. This launch is sponsored by the Malian Minister of Social Cohesion, Peace and National Reconciliation.

In the face of constant difficulties with existing conflict prevention and management mechanisms, this initiative contributes to building peace in Mali by developing a durable and long-term multi-stakeholder approach to peacebuilding that is based in and driven by local grassroots communities, while also connecting this work to the national and international levels. Through an innovative methodology combining the tested systemic action research methodology of IDS with participatory action research - a refined methodology by IMRAP and Interpeace - this new approach aims at engaging and empowering local actors of change in Bamako, Koulikoro, Gao and Mopti.

This launch is set to officially inform the national authorities as well as the different actors engaged in peacebuilding in Mali with the hope to invite them to take part in this exciting project. Specifically for the event launch, we aim to share with national and international stakeholders directly or indirectly involved in peacebuilding about the different methodological phases of the project, introduce the four implementing partners, and outline the key steps we as a partnership will take to achieve the desired results.

L'Institut Malien de Recherche Action pour la Paix/The Malian Action-Research Institute for Peace (IMRAP) is a Malian association created under the receipt N ° 0590 / G-DB on May 21, 2014 by Malians reflecting on peacebuilding. IMRAP is Mali's leading peacebuilding organization and has deep experience working with Malian communities on the obstacles to sustainable peace. IMRAP leads the operational implementation of H3I in Mali and coordinates political leadership at the national level.

Interpeace is an independent international peacebuilding organization recognized worldwide for its proven approach to helping societies build lasting peace. It was created by the United Nations in 1994 to develop innovative ways of resolving conflicts and remains today a strategic partner of the United Nations. Present in West Africa since 2007, Interpeace supports local peacebuilding processes in Mali, Côte d'Ivoire and Guinea-Bissau, among others. Interpeace manages the unique partnership of this project and supports with communication of this highly relevant work to national and international peacebuilding actors.

The Institute of Development Studies (IDS) is a top international development research institute founded in 1966 that has pioneered cutting edge research, teaching and communications. IDS has actively applied the systemic participatory action research across the world, including Myanmar, India and Nepal. For this project, IDS leads the technical application of the Systemic Action Research methodology and the design of the framework for monitoring, evaluation and learning (MEL) as well as accompaniment for the effective execution of these two elements.

Humanity United (HU) is a United States-based private foundation founded in 2008 dedicated to bringing new approaches to global problems that have long been considered intractable. HU is part of the Omidyar Group, which represents the philanthropic, personal, and professional interests of the Omidyar family. Humanity United's Peacebuilding & Conflict Transformation Portfolio seeks to change the way the peacebuilding sector addresses conflict by challenging ineffective practices of engaging local actors and making the case for a new approach built on the agency and power of local actors. HU funds the H3I program and partners with the other three organizations in the design and implementation of it, participating in key strategic, programmatic and learning processes, and supporting efforts to engage key stakeholders in and beyond Mali.
